SUMMER 1963

Great Things Ahead

I hope you will join me in my excitement about this next year at Whitworth. Academically, socially, and spiritually our college has more to offer us than ever. Of course, greater opportunities make greater demands on the student body.

The success of Whitworth "63-64" depends upon how we respond to these opportunities. The classroom, greater responsibilities in school policy-making, and new emphases in our religious program, stand ready to challenge us this fall. As we become part of the Whitworth community, we must realize how the school as a whole relates to each of us as individuals. Then we must each seek the best way to serve both ourselves and our college in the campus situation.

I feel that two basic ingredients are necessary for a worthwhile college experience: a positive attitude toward the educational philosophies of our school, and a confrontation with a constant, personal challenge. With changes to be made and traditions to be enjoyed, we can be confident that great things will happen.

It is a privilege to welcome you into the year ahead. In preparing to meet oncoming tests, let us set our sights on an enlightened mind and an inspired heart as we meet the year with the strength of the Christ who stands in our midst. Until September . . .

ASWC President

Two hundred seniors recently abandoned Whitworth halls — many to return as graduate students, some as sports spectators, others possibly never.

But behind this facade of inactivity, suggested by stately, mute pines which cover the campus, great ideas are stirring in faculty minds, administrators are formulating new policies and smoothing the old, and tradesmen are making campus improvements — all in preparation for a record high student enrollment. Two new deans — Simpson and McCleery — are mapping plans for curriculum and student services — a men's residence is under construction with occupancy slated for January 29 —

five additional faculty have joined the instructional staff in music, English and chemistry — research projects have slowed momentarily, only soon to be revived with renewed vigor — thirty returning Eurasian summer travelers will flavor fall classes with a flair of continentalism — several nationally known lecturers and artists have been signed for convocation and concert appearances — foundations and individuals have pledged new gifts and endowment for an expanding college.

We're glad you chose Whitworth.

Welcome to Whitworth! Here among the pines stands the college you will one day proudly call your Alma Mater. Here you will find a dedicated and highly qualified faculty, a beautiful campus, an outstanding student body.

Your college future stretches before you as an opportunity and a challenge. An opportunity to achieve the best education available in an environment tailored to help you grow both intellectually and spiritually — a challenge to grasp this opportunity.

Achieve the Best

DR. ROBERT L. MCCLEERY
Dean of Students

The office of Student Personnel Services is dedicated to standing at your side providing necessary assistance and guidance; a place to turn when you have questions, a source of help when you have problems.

We see as our purpose helping each Whitworth student make the most of his college opportunity, whether through the health service, the residence halls, in student government, in clubs and student organizations, or through personal counseling. If you are not certain of your academic plans, if your vocational future is unclear, if personal problems are disturbing you, this is the place to turn.

Finally, we are happy to join with 1200 other Whitworthians in offering you a friendly welcome and urging you to be friendly in return. And remember, you cannot make a friend without first making an acquaintance; and to make an acquaintance, you must first say, "hello!"

Welcome to All . . .

DR. FRANK F. WARREN
President

We are at the threshold of another college year, and again it is my good pleasure to welcome you to the campus. During the summer, few changes have been made in the physical plant and we are sure the new year will find the Field House in greater use. At long last work has started on the new men's dormitory, but it will not be ready before January. Otherwise, our large maintenance crew has been busy working on buildings, putting in new lawns and constantly improving our physical facilities.

Very shortly all of you will come to know Dr. Simpson, our new Academic Dean. Already you know him as a teacher of great ability, but this will be your first acquaintance with him as an administrator.

You will soon discover that the new strength we have brought to the faculty will give us added stature in the academic world — we have the finest Christian teacher-scholars. It our special hope that with Dr. McCleery, our new Dean of Students, giving so much of his time to the field of student activities, all of you will come to know him personally and recognize him for the outstanding leader that he is.

A great year lies ahead, but remember this — as far as you are concerned it will be no better than you make it and this will demand your topmost endeavor.

A shift in responsibilities brought me a new experience this summer — an unexpected early return to Whitworth.

At first, trading the deck of a sailboat for a chair in the dean's office seemed like a dubious transaction. But the move brought a compensating discovery: our campus has a special feeling in August, one so good that I soon had to admit that Priest Lake's paradise had been well lost.

For a while, that spirit was only vaguely reminiscent of some past happiness. Then it became clearer, and just as real as it was in my own home when I was a child. It is that steady anticipation, that joy given even to routine preparatory tasks when someone special is coming.

Some of you who are coming are well known to us. For us there is the expectation of renewal and growth. Others of you now are strangers, remarkable as that fact will seem in just a short time. For us there is the anticipation of that recurring marvel of human relations: casual acquaintances become friends and individuals become a group without losing one bit of their identity or individuality.

For all of us there will be the many aspects of campus life. To me, one of these is dominant. When we meet soon, whether as old friends or for one brief moment as strangers, we shall want to dispose of the amenities quickly so that we can get to the real business of a college, an honest and spirited interchange of the best we have and can gain in our hearts and minds.
